1. Hi Sara,
You asked about our reading group, and I think you would enjoy it. We meet once a week to share short stories, poems or interesting non-fiction. You do not have to finish a long novel before coming.
Bring something short that you like and one question about it. The leader is friendly and does not expect a formal speech. If speaking feels difficult at first, you can write a comment on a card. We are also discussing meeting times so that transport is less of a problem. Would you like to come with me next week?
Best wishes,
Nila

1. It explains what happens and lets newcomers know they can listen before choosing to speak.
The answer must match the stated details; accept equivalent accurate wording.
2. New members can listen first and choose when they are ready to speak.
Check the complete meaning, the verb and punctuation. Accept an equally accurate correction.
3. Your first meeting does not have to be a performance. Read the invitation, find out where to go and think of one question about a story you enjoy. You can listen before speaking. If anything is unclear, ask the organiser what a new member should expect.
