1. Good morning, everyone. Before we discuss planting or cleaning, I want us to think about our entrance. A sign may tell people that they are welcome, but do they believe it?
In the garden described in the passage, the gate had been locked for years. Opening it was useful, yet a volunteer's friendly words made the change feel real. A worker found a peaceful lunch spot, children noticed flowers and a visitor shared family memories. None of these experiences required an expensive new building.
Our first task is therefore to make the welcome clear and practical. Greet people without pressuring them. Explain where they can go, answer simple questions and check that paths are easy to use. Some visitors may need a seat or a quieter explanation. Others may want to look around without joining an activity.
We should also listen. Ask what would help, and avoid assuming that every visitor needs the same thing. A public space becomes welcoming through repeated acts of attention. Let us begin at the gate, where a small conversation can turn a printed invitation into an experience people trust. Thank you.

පොදු අවකාශයක් සැබෑවටම පිළිගැනීමෙන් යුත් තැනක් වන්නේ මිත්‍රශීලී කතාබහ, පැහැදිලි මඟපෙන්වීම්, පහසු ප්‍රවේශය සහ එක් එක් අමුත්තාගේ අවශ්‍යතාවලට සවන්දීම තුළිනි.

2. I used direct address and practical questions to involve the audience. My examples explain an abstract idea through familiar actions, while a clear final recommendation encourages readers or listeners to make a realistic change.

1. The sign promises welcome, but the map is difficult to read and gives limited route information.
The answer must match the stated details; accept equivalent accurate wording.
2. Our sign welcomes everyone, but we still need to check whether visitors can find and use the information.
Check the complete meaning, the verb and punctuation. Accept an equally accurate correction.
3. Our welcome sign is encouraging, but the small map does not yet meet every visitor's needs. Please test a larger map and collect clear information about alternative routes. Ask visitors which details they need before arriving. Their comments will help us improve the information rather than assume the first design is enough.

අමුත්තන්ට දැනට ඇති සිතියම ප්‍රමාණවත් නොවන බැවින්, විශාල සිතියමක් හා විකල්ප මාර්ග නොරතුරු අත්හදා බලා ඔවුන්ගේ අදහස් අනුව මඟපෙන්වීම් වැඩිදියුණු කළ යුතුය.

This is one model. Accept a relevant response that includes the requested details, uses clear language and does not invent claims about the source.
